All good questions

First the budget is $80 million, not $90 We had to cut $5 million from the project in order to start construction in February Friends offered to hold a capital campaign to raise that to built the building out students deserve

HISD policy says $7.5 million gives naming rights for the school The Kinders have been strong supporters of PVA since 2008 They see this as the beginning of a long partnership Good people and I feel honored that they are willing to step up with such a gift

I am sending an information email tomorrow which explains these points and a few others If today weren't a holiday I would do it now Plan is to talk through this with current students that we haven't gotten to tomorrow morning

The HISD Board is scheduled to vote to accept the gift and the name change tomorrow Note of clarification: the Kinders are aware that we will not be KHSPVA Always HSPVA Use kinder in formal name, The Kinder High School for the Performing and Visual Arts

Hope this helps

Scott,
I addressed this only in "general" because it was posted on Facebook:

[REDACTED] this has been in the media but is the school being renamed because of the 7.5 million donation for a 90 million building? After having conversations with some HSPVA alumnus and being a parent of one questioned why wouldn't one of the theaters be named after the Kinder family rather than changing the school name? Who are the Kinder family what's their relation to the Arts? Final question will there be a vote of the name change at this Thursday's board meeting?
